No large schemes or plans for the improvement of Live Stock on scientific lines can be undertaken, in the absence of reliable statistics relating to Live Stock. It is, therefore, of the first degree of importance that statistics should be collected in as accurate and correct a manner as possible. The public are requested to co-operate with the Enumerators and give them correct information when they come to them for collection of information relating to Live Stock in connection with the ensuing Live Stock Census, 1951.
